courtesy of the committee I is the pleasure of examining one for a statue to be placed in the new city hall which Tambil build for us at the count commission. Artists and emily-sealed to give their ideas for agree or group in marble, and with the best pull will have or of being named the designer, the notable drawings attention.

vealed to him. One can see the dis-tinction between the cumbersome court etiquette of spain and the open, generous couriesy of a free nation sinking into the duke's soul and mak-ing a republican of him. In order to make the situation clear to those who in remote ages may look upon the statue and not thoroughly understand how such an incident could have hap-pened, the designer has shown upon the three sides of the pedestal bronze plates bearing in relief the official cor-respondence relative to the duke's board bill as published in the newspapers. The duke's private comnewspapers. The duke's private comments on the incident will be inclosed in a burgiar proof steel box and buried—the designer does not say how deep—under the base of the status.

The fourth side of the pedestal will bear a representation of the reception of the duke's snoestor by the savages. The Indians are to be shown in the set of bringing their gold and law-ages. The Indians are to be shown in the act of bringing their gold and lay-ing it at the sect of Columbus. An in-scription will note the fact that com-paratively little gold was brought to the great discoverer in this way (though unhappily the amount cannot be exactly stated because the savages gave it without making a note of the otal while the duke's board bill footed up $87,540.81. Erected at this au-spicious season, the statue, with this inscription, will serve to mark the adrance in courteey and bookkeeping during four hundred years. As to the figure of the duke, it will he simply executed, yet very touching. His right hand will be extended to receive the key of Barren island, while in the other hand he will hold a copy of the New York World containing an article headed "His Nib's Underclothing," and consisting of a cabled interview dated Saragossa, but proceeding in reality from the third assistant laundress of the Hotel Waldorf, informing us how many days straight on the average the duke can wear a white

This design is excellent as a work of art, but will probably be rejected on account of the figure of the duke. He has wounded the senabilities of our city officials and we do not propose to immortalize him in marble. Redesting upon what we know of those senabilties we readily perceive that the inke's conduct must have been shock-ing. We do not need to know what he nother objection to this design is fact that the drawing of the dake shed on the day of his arrival. The per in question was unable to obtain certain of the duke, and so it took old block of Chancey Depaw and oped off a few lines with a jackhaife. Now, politically, we're "agin" Channey, but that doesn't make it right for us to stick up his image dressed in foreign clothes for every-

There have been many elements to deal encembelly with the typical olderman. The best of these will have to be reposted on the ground of expense. The effect of the clothing in this design is to be attained by using alternate stripps of black and white markie, and this would make the status cost a good deal of money, whereas the intention originally was to ascure a cheap status and use the surplus of the appropriation for the breadt of the organization. Another figure of an alderman is exceedingly elever in execution and would make a fine status, but if not up in the park it would cause no end of trouble to the pollocesse. It looks no much lifts the fellower who have room and board there is hot weather that the gray-coated quarrow chasers would be always trying to wake it up and drive it off its pedestal.

A large figure of the Tammany tiger pleased the committee, but it was rejected on the suggestion of one of the members that it would be taken as the sign of a gambiling house. This would lead people to inquire where the game was in progress, and it would necessitate a good deal of work on the part of the police and other 'officials who would be constrained by their courtesy to point out the locations of the various games on the side streets near the city hall park.

The suggestion which is almost sure to win is an allegorical group called "Justica." The person who sent it in teck Maggie Cline so his model, and he shows her as she appears in her famous old song "Throw him down, McCluskey." The committee, however, was quick to see that a great opportunity had been overlooked when Maggie was made to represent Justice. It is now proposed that Maggie stand for "de organization," while McCluskey and his untagonist are introduced visibly into the group is nitroduced visibly into the group as introduced visibly into the group of the force of the first make no difference," said Committeeman Swagtey, of the Foxert,

EGGS FOR BREAKFAST.

Ways of Cooking Them Which Have the Charm of Novelty.

There are many ways of cooking the familiar dish of eggs for breakfast which have the charm of novelty, and are just as good as the plain boiled, fried or acrambled eggs.

An excellent way is sur le plat. Lit-tle dishes come from the French kitch-en, which hold each one egg, but these are not necessary, as the eggs may all be broken on one platter. Butter the dish or dishes thoroughly. Sprinkle a little grated ham over the butter, break the eggs one by one on to the platter, being careful not to break the yolk. Sprinkle a little salt and pepper over them. Set the dish in a hot oven for about three or four minutes, or until the white of the egg is jellied. You may vary this dish by sprinkling a little minced chives or fine cut para-ley over them before they are put in the oven, or you may season them with a little cheese in place of the ham, or you may omit the ham altogether and eason the eggs simply with salt and pepper.

Scrambled eggs with asparagus is a deservedly favorite breakfast dish with epicures. It requires about a quarter of a bunch of boiled asparagus "peas," or the tips of the asparagus Break aix eggs into a hot saucepan in which a teaspoonful of butter has been added, season with sait and pepper and stir the mixture for three or four min-utes. Add the asparagus tips, stir once again and serve on the table.

A fried egg may be rendered a novelty by serving it with a nice sauce, like tomate or cream sauce. One of the best frying mixtures for eggs is sweet clive oil. Put two tablespoonfuls of oil in a clean saucepan and let it be-come very hot. Six or seven eggs can be cooked in this amount of oil if they are cooked one by one. If the oil is heated to a proper consistency it will require but half a minute to cook them through, leaving the yolk soft. If you wish a hard yolk they must be cooked one minute, half a minute before folding and half a minute after. N. Y.

First, make up your mind you won't try to see it all. Second, look through your own eyes. If you don't enjoy a picture or statue, don't waste time trying to become across picture or statue, don't waste time trying to, because some supposed critic or authority insists that it is great. If you are interested in machinery, see it to your heart's content; if you are not don't waste time trying to. Don't use valuable time trotting away over to the Mining Building unless you find especial delight in monuments of coal and figures which indicate that such or such a state turned out more million tons of coal than any or all others combined.
